Virtual Ways to Enjoy Cedar Hill Cemetery

Cedar Hill Cemetery Foundation made the difficult decision to cancel on-site programming for our 2020 season. Social distancing requirements regarding masks, spacing, and group size limit our ability to provide a comfortable program experience.

Although we can’t meet in person, the Foundation still aspires to share Cedar Hill’s art, history, and natural resources with you.

In addition to our popular Notable of the Month emails and Facebook posts, we have added new content to our social media distribution. The Foundation has developed online materials featuring highlights from canceled programs. New webpages and videos provide a virtual way to enjoy the cemetery.

Check out our YouTube channel to view short videos on a variety of topics. Posted to date: Richard Beckwith, Titanic Survivor; Barnstormers & Aviators; Notable Trees; The Celtic Cross; Jacob Weidenmann, Landscape Architect; and Monumental Man: James G. Batterson.

More videos are in the works, so don’t forget to like and subscribe to our channel.

New pages have been added to our website as well including When Disaster Strikes, Barnstormers & Aviators, Stories in Stone, Sam & Elizabeth’s World, Monumental Man: James G. Batterson, and Angels Among Us.

The online exhibition Remarkable Women showcases some of the extraordinary women laid to rest at Cedar Hill. The downloadable PDF was created to celebrate the centennial of the ratification of the 19th Amendment granting women the right to vote.

Cedar Hill staff and volunteers continue to research new subjects and look forward to sharing details with you. We will send email blasts, post on Facebook, upload videos to YouTube, and update our website over time.

Some of this research will be included in new thematic tours to hopefully debut in 2021. We are currently working on Planes, Trains & Automobiles and The Plot Thickens.

Visit our website, cedarhillfoundation.org, for links to all new content.

A Monumental Party Canceled

Cedar Hill Cemetery Foundation’s annual fundraiser, A Monumental Party: Jeans & Jewels, has been canceled.

The event, originally scheduled for May 13 and postponed until September 23, was to raise funds for the preservation of the Statue of Hope, which graces the top of the Jewel Monument.

After thoughtful consideration, Cedar Hill made the difficult decision to cancel Foundation activities through October 31. This includes A Monumental Party: Jeans & Jewels.

During this challenging time, Cedar Hill does not feel we can offer a comfortable experience while meeting social distancing requirements regarding masks, spacing, and group size. For the safety of guests, volunteers, and staff, we feel it is best to forgo the annual fundraiser this year.

We look forward to resuming our programs and fundraising activities when it is safe to do so.

Thank you to our Sponsors who graciously supported the preservation of the Statue of Hope.

Stories in Stone - The Obelisk

The obelisk is a tall, four-sided, narrow tapering monument which ends in a pyramid-like shape at the top. Obelisks were prominent in the architecture of the ancient Egyptians, who placed them in pairs at the entrance of temples.

Napoleon’s campaign into Egypt (1798–99) included a scientific expedition resulting in several publications in the early 19th century. These publications led to the incorporation of Egyptian motifs such as the obelisk, hieroglyph, sphinx, and pyramid into architecture and decorative arts.

With its funerary symbolism, the Egyptian Revival style was often seen in cemeteries, most notably in the form of the obelisk which represented eternal life or a ray of sunlight.

In June 1874, a Hartford Courant article noted that “a splendid monument has just been erected at Cedar Hill Cemetery upon the lot owned by Calvin Day, Esq.” The work of Batterton & Canfield Company, the monument design was based on the Lateran Obelisk.

The Lateran Obelisk, located in the Piazza San Giovanni in Laterano, is the highest and oldest obelisk in Rome. Carved in red granite, it originally stood at the Temple of Amun, Karnak, Egypt, and was built by Pharaoh Tuthmosis III in the 15th century BC. More than 1700 years later, the Emperor Constantine, brought the obelisk to Rome as a decoration for the Circus Maximus.

Constantine had to build a special ship to transport the monument. It was first brought to Alexandria where it stood for several decades. In 357 AD, it was brought to Rome. With the fall of the Western Roman Empire in the 5th century, the Circus Maximus was abandoned and the obelisk eventually broke and was buried by mud and debris. Pieces of the obelisk were found in the 14th and 15th centuries and were eventually fully excavated in 1587. It was re-erected near the Lateran Palace the following year, although 12 feet shorter.

When it was erected in August 1588, it became the last ancient Egyptian obelisk to be erected in Rome. The obelisk was topped with a cross and the pedestal was decorated with inscriptions explaining its Egyptian history and its travels to Alexandria and Rome.

According to the Courant, the Day obelisk was the largest monument based on the Lateran model in the United States. It measures nearly 8 ½ feet square at the base with a total height of about 60 feet.
